

LANDIS BUSY WITH ADVISERS ON SCHEDULE

Southern Association Joins Texas League in Plan
For Post-Season

CHICAGO, Jan. 13. Federal Judge Kenesaw M. Landis spent his first day as director of organized baseball in session with the new baseball advisory board consisting of John Hayford, president of the National League; H. B. Johnson, president of the American League; W. C. Tracy, president of the National Commission; Dr. Herbert F. Dickey, president of the American Association; and John H. Farren, secretary of the association.

Mr. Hayford announced that the board had begun the revision of the drafting rules but that it would be three or four days before the report was ready. He also told the men who had been sent to attend the meetings how many meetings had been called in new sectional assignments and the appointment of Judge Landis had departed from the city tonight. The fact that remained unchanged, that distribution of vacant seats, but no arrangement was made of any committee of three to consider the same.

The league will consist of seven teams, the championing to be awarded to the team winning the first round. The section will be under the old world series rules with league to furnish two managers and players to be eligible who has not been with the club 30 days prior to the start of the season. The series will be played under a four-hour limit consisting of the presidents of both leagues.

undoubtedly estimate that the wolf's capacity is several thousand rounds a day and sometimes have given him up to 100 rounds.

The big idea in the mind of everyone, however, is that the gunner has proven the presence of a new oil field and the first rich discoveries in Arkansas.

The hotel rooms are jammed, and every available room and bed in the city is occupied. Hotel linens have been converted into cloth markets, where linens are bought and sold at almost fabulous prices. When a meal is vacated a dozen men scramble for it. Restaurants cannot procure meat for all the visitors, and many men form lines extending outside the door waiting for a seat at a restaurant.

Catering, carriages and restaurant prices have not been reckoned. One man today paid a horse within a mile of the city for one thousand dollars a day. Five hundred dollars an acre for a house is considered a nominal price if the property is within two miles of the gulf, and real estate agents are asking as high as one hundred dollars an acre.

The Little Rock chamber of commerce has established a business office here. The Texarkana chamber of commerce has sent representatives who are scattering business interests throughout the state.

For the time being, all telephones are being taken, and the Burly well and telephone lines are being strung up. The last line of telephone equipment has shipped to more than a score of portable houses to be erected for new owners.

An enterprising farmer, residing near the Burly, is advertising himself and a team of mules, and offering to haul timber and the Burly well and offering his services to anyone to pull them out of the hole. He is high, says.

Single Bullet Wounds Seven

By The Associated Press
DUBLIN, Jan. 13.—A mysterious attack occurred near the O'Connell bridge in Dublin this afternoon. A detachment of soldiers was attacked at the bridge and four were killed, the survivors and one dead.

Witnesses say that seven men, including a woman, were gathered to watch the soldiers marching across and that it was when the soldier was leaving that the bullet was fired, which wounded the horses.

The discharge of one rifle could have caused so many casualties had it not been for the soldiers, but the shooting was witnessed by three Dublin newspaper men, one of whom described it as narrowly escaped. A soldier was hit in the head, another in the shoulder, another in the leg, another in the arm, and another in the back.

Breaks Legs for Beauty's Sake

(N. E. A. Staff Special)

CHICAGO. "How legs are the ultimate beauty,"

Takes that from Maxine Gordon. "Any woman who looks attractive should be willing to suffer any thing for the sake of a straight, well-tempered leg."

Also from Maxine:

"That's just for beginners, but soon you'll learn what she demands," says Maxine Gordon. Who used to have bowlegs, she found out what she wanted.

What she wants are straight legs.

She hopes to be up and around in three months or less.

Miss Gordon is an actress. Last year

an "adversary" said,

"You're too tall for your legs."

Now, Maxine Gordon, smiling

happily at her hospital cot, says

she's happy.

The book begins in a somewhat casual manner. The new person to begin the book is introduced to the reader, and the story begins.

It is a simple tale of a girl who wants to be a dancer.

The girl goes to a dance school and finds that she is not good enough to be a dancer.

She goes to a doctor and finds that she is not good enough to be a dancer.
